LARRY HANNA, candidate for A.S. president, talks to reporters after allegedly being attacked Tuesday by an unidentified Black student. Hanna has gained notoriety in the past weeks for his opposition to the "Fair Representation Amendment."

Horton Invalidates Election; Violence Given as Reason

By WILLIAM LAWRENCE CRAWFORD
Staff Writer

The run-off election for Student Body President was declared null and void yesterday by Valley College President Dr. Robert Horton as a result of "threatening" acts against candidates during the campaign.

Another run-off election will be held next semester.

Horton said in a formal, written statement that he would not support student activities and student elections that were not carried out in a "democratic manner."

This statement was prepared and made available to the general public yesterday.

When asked if the invalidation might be considered a concession to violence, Horton said, "I'm not giving in to anything. They can accomplish their ends by democratic means, but I will not allow them to do so by undemocratic means."

Tuesday night, Larry Hanna, presidential candidate, asked William Lewis, dean of students; Bruno Cicotti, coordinator of student activities; and Horton to postpone the elections for one day due to injuries he had received Monday from an unidentified assailant (see story, this page). Hanna's doctor suggested a rest, but Hanna felt he would be at a disadvantage if he could not campaign.

When asked how she felt about the invalidation order, Jo Anne Orijel, presidential candidate running against Hanna, commented, "I was very disappointed for the first time in this campaign. I sat down and cried."

Ms. Orijel felt that the greatest disappointment was the loss of all the time and work already expended. She stated that, "Hanna, through his name-calling, has created the situation that resulted in the invalidation of the presidential run-off."

At noon, yesterday, a meeting of the Student Election Committee was held to decide on a possible date for the new run-off. Hanna and Orijel were asked to attend and were given an equal opportunity to express their opinions on the matter.

Each of the members of the election committee voiced their opinion and the matter was discussed and voted on.

It was agreed that the new run-off election would be held the third week of the fall semester, according to Glenn Faircloth, committee chairman. The main reason given for this decision was that the longer span of time between old and new run-offs would give everyone time to "cool off."

The minutes of the committee meeting will be voted on today by A.S. Council (they must approve the decision by a majority vote).

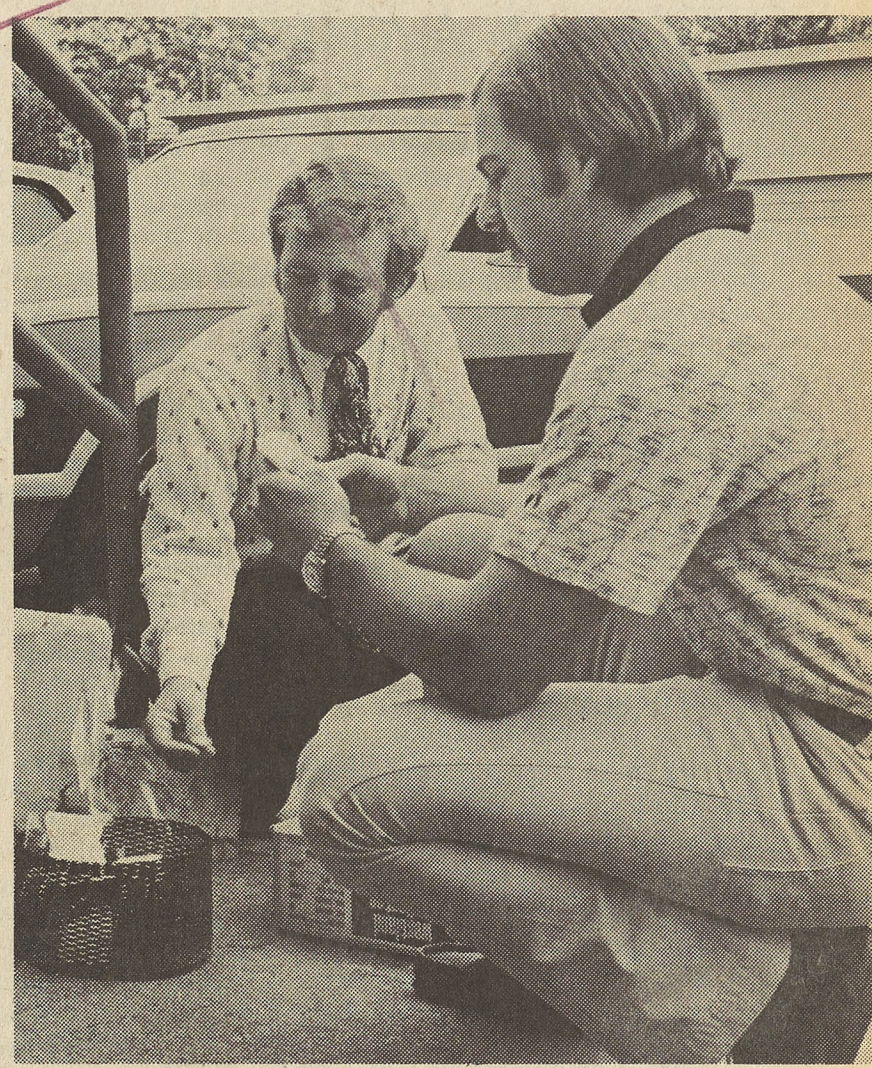

Cicotti, who presided over the meeting, said, "I think the decision made by the election committee was the best for all the students."

A.S. Ethnic Rep. Election Delayed

Although the "Fair Representation Amendment" was passed last week, elections for the two offices it creates will not be held until next semester, according to Bruno Cicotti, coordinator of student activities.

"I'd expect a good turnout, but, in order to run that election, we need about 14 days. Unfortunately, we don't have that much time remaining in this semester," he explained.

Cicotti figures that the elections for commissioners of Black and Chicano ethnic studies will be held in the third week of the fall semester.

PRESIDENTIAL BALLOTS, cut from the other part of the card, are destroyed by Bruno Cicotti (left), coordinator of student activities, and Glen Faircloth (right), commissioner of elections early Wednesday morning after the vote was declared "invalid."

VC Won't Press Suit On 'Door Slamming'

By WILLIAM LAWRENCE CRAWFORD
Staff Writer

A.S. presidential hopeful Larry Hanna was in effect "vindicated" Tuesday of charges of deliberately slamming a door on a student at a recent A.S. Council meeting.

Donald Brunet, dean of educational services, who handed down the decision, said that he would recommend that the college not take any action against Hanna on the matter.

Summoned to Testify
Hanna, who is currently commissioner of campus improvements, was summoned to a hearing in the office of William Lewis, dean of students, last Friday when a formal complaint was issued to the college by student Paulette Canavaras. Miss Canavaras was injured during a meeting of the Student Council May 1.

Lewis, who ordinarily presides over student hearings, disqualified himself from this particular case because he felt he might be called as a witness for either side.

Lewis felt he could not be considered completely impartial in such a situation. As a result of this disqualification, Brunet was asked to officiate at the hearing.

Ms. Canavaras Leaves
At about mid-point in the proceedings, while student witnesses were being called in to give testimony, Ms. Canavaras left the office to go and rest at the suggestion of her mother, who was present at the hearing.

While lying down in the health office, Ms. Canavaras stated that as a result of the altercation at the council meeting, "I have had to spend two days in the hospital and have close to $300 in medical bills."

Ms. Canavaras also said, "I think he (Hanna) should be suspended and made responsible for the payment of all the medical bills."

After the hearing Hanna made the statement that, "A lot of people came in and lied." Hanna also said, "Each witness told a different story about what happened."

When asked why he had only one witness present in his defense Hanna said, "Most of my witnesses are Student Council members and I wouldn't want to waste their time by asking them to come in and give testimony."

Hanna said, "I feel their testimony isn't necessary due to the conflicting stories given by the opposing witnesses."

When asked how far she intended to pursue the matter, Ms. Canavaras said, "That remains to be seen. It will depend on the outcome of this hearing."

MARCY YOUNG, Crown Editor, pleads for funds in wake of finding next year's publication deleted from A.S. budget. Also deleted from the budget was Sceptre, the evening division magazine. A bevy of journalism students jammed council quarters in protests to cuts that, in effect, chopped off 85 percent of the department's A.S. funds for the coming semester.

Council Receives, Approves New Budget in One Session

By GARY BENJAMIN NORTH
Staff Writer

Student Council received and approved next year's $301,007.81 A.S. budget—said to have something for almost everybody—in one sitting last week.

Because she said that the budget was already late in being presented,

A.S. President Jennifer Goddard had the council vote on the budget at the same meeting it was presented to the student officers.

Ordinarily, the council members would be given two weeks to deliberate on the matter. Miss Goddard, however, told them that the budget had to be returned to instructors by this week so teachers could plan their next semester's curriculum.

It was also noted that A.S. Treasurer Marshall Pepperman was not present at the council meeting. Pepperman has been blamed by many council members with delaying the budget.

Only two groups—radio and journalism—bothered to lobby for additional funds at the council meeting (which is usually held on Tuesdays at noon, but was delayed until Thursday at 11 a.m. both last week and today because of staff scheduling problems).

All departments were given the opportunity to discuss their individual financial requests during recent daily meetings of the Finance Committee, which designed the budget.

Tight on funds, next year's budget will not include a contingency reserve, so additional funding will have to come by pulling money from other departments, as the council did for KLAU.

The campus radio station showed up with a few of its student workers to ask for more than the $900 it was allotted. That amount was later raised to $1,500 by transferring some money from a dance fund in the new budget. KLAU had asked for $5,665.

Reinstated into the budget was Crown yearbook, which the planners of the budget originally had excluded along with Sceptre magazine and Diadem, the evening students' handbook. Diadem is scheduled to be combined with Sceptre to save costs—provided Sceptre returns.

'U.S.' Slate Gains Control Of Council

By LEWIS SAMUEL SNOW
City Editor

This election has showcased a most massive political landslide by the "U.S." slate. Twelve members of the slate, which stands for "United Students for Responsive Government," were elected to office, giving that group firm control of next semester's 16 member A.S. Council.

Approved last week was the "Fair Representation Amendment," which would create the offices of commissioners of Black and Chicano ethnic studies. It obtained 16 more votes than the two-thirds majority it needed to pass.

Also approved was the "Secretarial Amendment," which requires that the offices of recording and corresponding secretaries be appointive, non-voting, and paid. It was overwhelmingly approved.

Marty Dickman was elected to the post of commissioner of elections, but due to a recent A.S. Supreme Court ruling, she must be approved by the fall council. With 12 fellow "U.S." members on that body, she probably will receive automatic confirmation.

Hanna 'Attacked' During Campaign

By WILLIAM ALLEN YUDEN
News Editor

Larry Hanna, A.S. presidential candidate, was assaulted Tuesday, according to Wally Gudzus, chief of campus security.

Hanna, presently serving as commissioner of campus improvements, was reportedly hit on the forehead, on the top of the head, and given a "karate chop" on the back of the neck.

According to Hanna, he was passing out campaign literature near the tennis courts at the north end of the Life Science Building, when a Black male approached him and said, "You've gone too far." The assailant according to Hanna, then dealt out three blows which resulted in a bruise above his right eye and a one inch cut on the top of his head.

Tom Nixon, chief justice, began running toward Hanna when he heard the victim shout for help, at this point the assailant fled. Hanna later filed a report with the LAPD.

Earlier that day there was a confrontation between Hanna and predominantly Black and Chicano students that result in the filing of two complaints of battery.

According to Hanna, he was passing out campaign literature near Monarch Square, when about 20 students approached him. One of them, Albert Bevins, said, "Aren't you giving this (the literature) to Black students?" He then gave him one of the flyers and Bevins tore it up. Hanna then said to Bevins, "That really shows how much brains you have."

At this point, the verbal argument turned into a shoving match involving Bevins, Richard Morales Stewart and Hanna. Hanna and Stewart have filed citizens complaints of battery against each other. Each student blames the other for initiating the physical confrontation.

Trustee Offices Up In Tuesday Election

By LEWIS SAMUEL SNOW
City Editor

Dr. Ralph Richardson, a professor of speech at UCLA; and Peter R. Taft, an attorney at law; will fight it out Tuesday for the seat that will give the Board of Trustees' moderates a 4-3 edge for the first time in the four-year history of the L.A. Community College District.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. this Tuesday. The City Clerk's Office expects substantial totals by 9 p.m. that night with final results possibly before midnight.

Voters will choose either candidate to fill both the unexpired and full term of the office vacated by the former board president, Mike Antonovich. Antonovich was elected to the State Assembly in November. Since that time, the board has been operating with only six members and has been deadlocked, 3-3, on many major issues.

Richardson

The 54-year-old Richardson is a former president of the Board of Education. In 1962, he lost a bid to become state superintendent of public instruction to Max Rafferty.

In a recent Star interview, Richardson charged that the board's conduct is a major cause of low faculty morale. He terms himself an "independent."

"I am not seeking to go on that board as the pocket vote or the kept man of any one or two or three trustees," he said.

"If elected, I can approach all six members of that board as an independent and say, 'Come, let us reason together.'"

Taft

A former law clerk to U.S. Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren, the Republican Taft narrowly lost to Marian La Follette two years ago in his previous attempt to gain a seat on the board.

Taft, also in a recent Star interview, hit out at the lack of communication between the Board and faculty, along with the same lack between the district and its community.

Advocating community conferences, the "slate mate" of Trustees Arthur Bronson and Frederic Wyatt, has said, "We can there explain... and develop a program to meet their needs."

"The college should then use these same groups... as a means to recruit potential students."

Both gentlemen agree on giving college presidents more "autonomy" in running their respective college campuses.

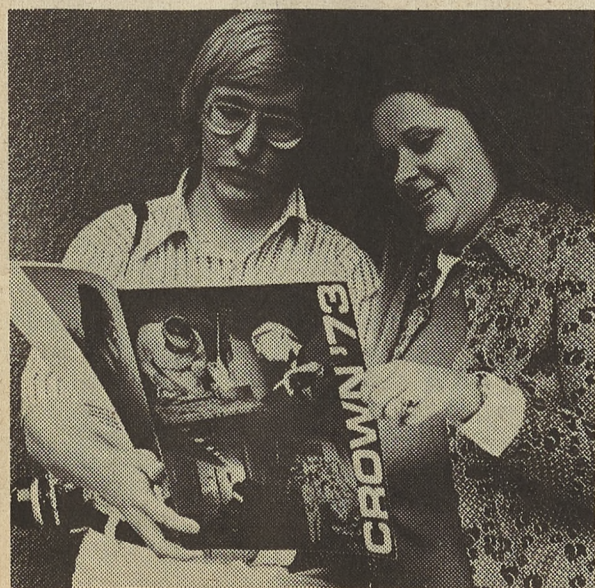

Also up for bids in Tuesday's election are the offices of mayor (incumbent Sam Vorty vs. Councilman Tom Bradley in a repeat of their 1969 battle), city attorney, two Board of Education posts, one Valley area councilmanic seat, and five city charter amendments.

Case Postponed On Assault 'Duo'

Attorneys for Valley College students Albert Bevins and Richard Morales Stewart have postponed court hearings for the two until June 4 and May 29, respectively.

Bevins is charged with assault against campus security chief Wally Gudzus outside an A.S. Council meeting several weeks ago, and Stewart and Bevins are charged with "disturbing the peace" and "disrupting a public meeting (A.S. Council)."

Crown—Pictorial Review Premieres

Crown '73 will finally be here Wednesday. After several weeks of waiting, the magazine is almost ready to be distributed to the students at Valley.

Contained within its 112 pages are features on students, sports, faculty, and fine arts. "The award-winning magazine attempts to synthesize the year at Valley into a compact and coherent record," said Marcy Young, editor of Crown '73. "I believe the staff has successfully combined their talents to produce an interesting magazine with something for everyone contained within its pages."

No strict theme was chosen for this year's Crown according to Miss Young. Instead the magazine focused on the year at Valley with articles representing the various activities which occurred.

Assisted by a staff of 15, Miss Young and chief photographer Bill Ross directed the magazine through every stage of production beginning in September until the magazine went to press in April. Faculty advisers to the publication are Henry Lalane and Edward Irwin.

"Crown represents a new trend in college yearbooks," says Ross. "It's an innovative approach to covering the year at a college campus."

Crown will be available in the Business Office and the Journalism Department. Students will also

Sceptre—A Death We Can't Afford

As a cost saving measure, A.S. Council deleted all funds for Sceptre magazine in its initial budget for next year, thus dealing the death blow to the publication that has for the past 13 years catered expressly to the unique interests of the evening students on campus.

In the long run, Star thinks that Council's action will prove detrimental not only to the evening student population but the outlying community as well. More importantly, potential magazine writers and photographers will be robbed of the opportunity to nurture their talent in a realistic magazine learning situation.

Council argued that in recent issues Sceptre has been guilty of straying off campus and, in some instances, neglecting the best interests of the evening student. It further rationalized that coupled alongside Crown, the magazine yearbook, Sceptre was a superfluous publication.

Granted, Sceptre is overdue for a thorough revamping, but Star questions whether Council seriously considered the basic concept behind the publication or its distinguished past and potential.

In essence, Sceptre is a writer's magazine. It's unique in that unlike Crown, its staff deals with timely, pertinent issues and must work under realistic monthly deadline pressures.

Theoretically, the experience a student derives by investing his time and effort in such a student magazine as Sceptre will enable him to work competently on a commercial publication. Manifested by the numerous Sceptre alumni presently employed in local professional magazines, this system has proven to be a marked success.

Besides focusing its attention on campus happenings that directly appeal to the interests of evening students, Sceptre is the sole publication that spotlights singular services that the school offers to its 7,000 nighttime students ranging from community service events to vocational testing and counseling.

(It should be noted that in every election, candidates for Council seats openly court the vote of the evening students, and that a sizable portion of these limited students pay their A.S. fee in addition to their regular adult dues.)

Additionally, Sceptre aids the college in its drive to tap potential students in the community by publicizing specialized classes taught only at night such as sculpture and engineering geology in provocative features. Copies of the publication have always been readily available to interested members of the community.

While Council absorbs itself in the arbitrary task of determining what areas can be cut from the budget to check the drain on its limited funds, Star urges its readers to ponder the following persistent question—In the greater interest of the college and the community at large, can we afford NOT to have a Sceptre magazine?

The only thing they could call their own.

Office of Economic Opportunity: Did It Win Its 'War on Poverty?'

By JUDIE GAUGENMAIER
Staff Writer

There's nothing beautiful or appealing about poverty. It looks ugly and it is ugly. Even the word itself sounds grim and depressing. No one with half a heart would wish it on anybody, yet millions of Americans live in poverty right now.

Eight years ago, the Johnson administration began the Office of Economic Opportunity to wage a "war on poverty." Its real accomplishment during these last eight years are difficult to estimate but one thing sure is that poverty is still with us in all of its grisly glory.

The war has not in any way been won and OEO itself has been plagued with controversy since its inception. Now with this office in the process of being dismantled and phased out and many people are anxious to know what it all means.

OEO never was a single program but rather a collection of projects to aid the poor. Such as: Job Corps, VISTA, Community Action agencies, etc. Many of the programs will be continued but will operate out of other agencies. For example: Programs for Indians will be placed under HEW and funding will be increased from $9.7 million to $32.1 million, aid to migrant workers will now be handled by the Labor Department. Appropriations were increased for this program also, from $36.3 million to $40 million, and so on. Some programs will receive more funds and some less but most will be continuing to operate nonetheless.

One reason given as to why the Nixon administration has decided to close up OEO is because of wasted funds. In a nationwide speech on Feb. 24 President Nixon said, "Too much money has been going to those who were supposed to help the needy and too little to the needy themselves." He has not been alone in this feeling.

Senator Abraham Ribicoff (D-Conn.) once suggested that perhaps all the poverty workers should be fired and the money thus saved should be sent to the poor. This wasn't taken seriously, but he certainly has a point. If enormous amounts of money are going to pay for the administration of programs such as these, and the bureaucrats are getting more benefits than the poor themselves something is all wrong.

If this is true, it is entirely possible that more could be accomplished, even on less money, just through better management of the money available.

In view of the plans to break up OEO, Philip V. Sanchez, a Mexican-American from Fresno, resigned his post as director of OEO on Jan. 31 of this year.

Magazine's Death Mourned by Editor

It's 2:02 a.m. Sunday morning. As I look out my bedroom window, the moon shines amongst the leaves of my neighbors' rice plants, and my mind begins to recollect through the innumerable tons of thoughts about the past year and a half.

The Valley Star. Three words with six times as many connotations. To some, it's the mouthpiece of irresponsible, biased, and ignorant journalists.

To others, it's one of the most highly revered college newspapers in the United States. But, what is it to journalism students? It's a learning experience, a laboratory class.

That is one fact that no one outside of the department seems to remember. That the Star is in actuality a laboratory class allowing students the experience of putting out a newspaper.

Along with putting out this paper, we are learning, and learning the hard way. In our quest to learn a trade, we do make mistakes. And, without a doubt, we hear about our mistakes almost immediately.

But no one seems to remember, it is sad to state, that we are students, students trying to learn a trade, and who are trying to do the best damn job that we can.

LEW SNOW
City Editor

I venture that it could be said I'm being put out to pasture by the paper. At least that's how it feels.

I leave the paper, though, on a sad note. One of its counterparts, Sceptre magazine, has died a sudden death. As of today, Thursday, Student Council has refused to find funding so that it may be published next semester.

To steal a phrase: Forgive them, they know not what they do.

Sceptre offers an entirely different learning experience than any of its other counterparts, Star and Crown.

Different from Star, of course, because of the nature of the writing style differences between newspapers and magazines.

Different from Crown because of Sceptre's nature. Crown is done at a leisurely pace. It affords the writer and photographer the chance to "sit-back" and review the situation. Because of this, the learning processes of Crown are entirely different than those of Sceptre.

Sceptre is a "fast" produced magazine. Because of this, the writer and photographer must do it right the first time. Therefore, the writing, photography, and production of this magazine are not like any other magazine class now offered on campus.

Also, Sceptre is the only publication that centers on the evening division student. They pay their I.D. fees, and they deserve some benefits. Sceptre is one of those benefits.

Cutting Sceptre involves chopping off the right arm of the Journalism Department. It will be difficult for the department to recruit students without this magazine production class.

If money can be found in next semester's already meager A.S. budget for dances, concerts, awards, conventions, banquets, and the like, then surely money can be found for the continuing of an educational experience like Sceptre.

This is how A.S. funds should be managed.

I leave you on this note: Ego trips and money, the roots of all man's ever-present evils.

When Valley Was Young

"Oohs" and "aahs" were decried when radio personality Dick Whittinghill visited the IOC dance in March 1959. Seems like Whittinghill has been around longer than KMPC.

Petitions were circulated in April 1959 to allow sectarian books in the library. Little did they know what books they can find in some libraries now.

Star topped its ninth All-American in May of 1959. Today, Star has amassed 32 All-Americans.

Valley was agog on May 21, 1959 when Sandy Kennedy was picked "Fiesta Queen." The Fiesta, in those days, was the big bash of the semester, next to the prom.

A.S. Fee Serves as Poll Tax, Restricts Institution of Voting

Editor: One of the better institutions of America is that of voting. For the couple of years that I have been of age to vote I have taken every opportunity I could to exercise this right.

I have attended Valley College for but one year and I am very much disturbed by the voting process here. At one point in America's history they had a poll tax. This, however, has now been abolished in state, local, and federal elections.

It has not, however, been abolished at Valley College. If one desires to voice his opinion at Valley's polls he must first show his paid I.D. card. If one doesn't have a paid I.D. card, he cannot vote. This, sirs, is a poll tax.

I ride my bicycle here so I have no use for a parking lot sticker and I work while most activities are going on on campus. Therefore, I claim it a waste of money to pay $10 when I won't get a chance to use this now paid I.D. except occasionally at the Student Store and for voting.

I know of many other students who feel the same way—cheated. Would it not be possible to allow all to vote without a poll tax? Would it make that great a difference? No! In fact, it would allow those who are in a similar predicament to mine to express their opinions and let their voices have equal time at the polls.

I hope that this will awake some sleeping minds in student government and that perhaps some action will be taken.

Dancerettes Slighted?

Editor: I personally took an article to the Valley Star News Office on Monday, May 7, for publication in the Valley Star on May 10. Prior to delivering the material I called and spoke to two individuals including the Sports Editor. I was referred to him though I do not think this is sports news. I explained the Dancerettes program and asked that the article be placed in a prominent place in the paper in order that as many girls as possible would see it.

My reception at the news office was rather cool and the Sports Editor dismissed me rather hurriedly with the comment, "I've spoke to her already, have her place it on my desk!" To my dismay the article was NOT in the May 10th issue at all. I was able to reach one of the Star advisors, Mr. Irwin, who immediately referred me to the City Editor, Lew Snow. Mr. Snow explained the situation by saying that after receiving news for publication, it was their decision not to print the enclosed article until the following week. This meant that it would appear in the paper after the first workshop had been held. This move will have serious effects upon our attendance on Tuesday, May 15.

The Valley Star is the college newspaper. It should be one of the chief means of bringing campus activities to the attention of the students. I strongly feel that college news should have priority over such news as the Renaissance Pleasure Faire in Agoura for example.

Therefore, I am voicing my displeasure with your decision. I dislike having campus news pushed aside, particularly when you decide it is all right to delay printing news until after part of the event has taken place. I think you can and should be more selective in your decisions as to what should be printed and to give priority to news dealing with Valley College activities.

I am sure if you give this matter further thought you can understand my thinking, feelings, and actions.

Reacts to Ad

Editor: The misrepresentations in the ad calling for Jews to convert and/or accept Jesus as messiah are carefully concealed in text and photo described as "tongue in cheek" by the group that paid for it. Allow me to add another "tongue in cheek" observation: Not all Romans were for Torquemada, the Grand Inquisitor of Spain, but the consequences for the hundreds of thousands tortured and murdered are well known all the same.

Now, some of the progeny of Torquemada want to love us to death, in trade for the original offer of hell. Jewish history is filled with the record of masqueraders posing as friends as well as of those posing as Jewish friends at that!

The essential issue is not whether or how the Baptist Board of Missions to the Jews wishes to spend its money nor is it one of the appropriateness of the academic study of living and historical movements, cultures or religions at Valley College, but THE FACT that in submitting and printing the ad in question, the ad payers and The Star were in violation of the Spring 1972 agreement in the guidelines which include the following:

A. No religious club or other group shall pass out literature or sponsor programs on campus that derogate another religion or faith; are directed to another specific religious group or faith; compares two or more religious faiths;

B. No . . . public religious testimonials or services;

C. No . . . deceitful methods of publicity;

D. No . . . religious proselytization on campus. I would hope that those who supported the submission of the ad in question to the Star will be more effective in restraining their religious zeal in the service of their moral agreements.

Otherwise we are likely to be subjected again to the spectacle of debating "whose daddy is bigger?", which is totally irrelevant to the academic community.

English Course Taught With Witticisms and Truisms

By DIANNE GROSSKOPF
Managing Editor

There are problems to freedom. For hundreds of years poets, philosophers, and artists have explored these problems.

On Valley's campus, a semi-small English literature class also explores the problems of freedom, through the study of 200 years of English literature.

On first impression, a student would expect a rigid, totally organized course. Even the college catalog's description of English 6 is deceiving: "A historical survey of English literature from Blake to T. S. Eliot, with special emphasis on the major writers and works."

Similarly, the student would expect a composed, thoroughly professional "no nonsense" instructor from the physical appearance of Mrs. Shirley Lowry, who teaches the course.

The shy, easily flustered instructor appears to be somewhat like the stereotyped woman English teacher, wearing her hair in a slightly disarrayed bun atop her head, and peering cautiously from behind her glasses.

But she only appears to be. A former student of hers disclosed that this appearance didn't last all of last semester. The final meeting of the class Mrs. Lowry literally "let her hair down." Her traditional knee-length skirts were abandoned for jeans and a T-shirt, and the familiar bun was done away with.

fessor of English, said, "She could be called thorough and conscientious." And that she is. The course material is thoroughly examined and explained.

But along the way, there are bits of witticisms and truisms offered by

Mrs. Lowry, such as "Selfishness is a little box—and not a very fun one, either," or that "The key to personal success is creativity plus discipline."

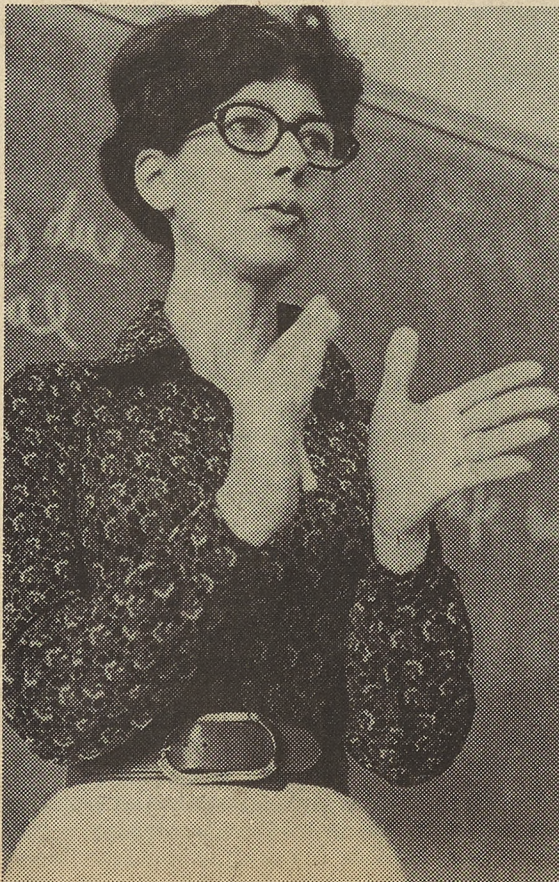

Occasionally, Mrs. Lowry has been known to get flustered at the beginning of her class. When that happens, she merely walks out the door, and re-enters as if coming in for the first time, thoroughly composed.

Perched on a table, legs tucked underneath her, she reprimands herself by exclaiming, "What am I doing?" then covers her face with both hands until she can continue her lecture.

The farce has ended. Her cover has cracked. Now we know; the real Mrs. Lowry has emerged, and with her emergence the feeling for English literature has been relayed.

"These are my personal property," Dr. Fred Brinkman, president of Los Angeles Trade-Tech, told the court, "and I refuse to bring them in on the basis that these memoranda may tend to incriminate me."

Last year, Dr. Brinkman invoked the Fifth Amendment when asked to bring evidence of "memoranda concerning student files and the use of electronics and other surveillance devices to record, monitor or listen to confidential and other communications of students and instructors."

Karl Harris, district chief of police, did not invoke the Fifth Amendment June 6, 1972, in regards to recording a Trade-Tech campus speaker, as Star reported April 26. Harris' protection against self-incrimination was referring to a claim by AFT President Arnold Fletcher, that a Board of Trustees meeting was "secretly video-taped" at its downtown office.

Charges of campus surveillance and electronic eavesdropping are currently being investigated by the Assembly Judiciary Subcommittee on Privacy. The three-man subcommittee is headed by Charles Warren (D-56th District), who has been receiving information on specific individuals in the district.

Dr. Brinkman's appearance before the court was to answer questions regarding two $1 million "invasion of privacy" lawsuits against the Los Angeles Community College District. Both suits originated from alleged incidents at Trade-Tech.

In a recent development, William G. Kearns, an investigator for one of the litigations, was refused access to public records.

Director Calls in

While researching the official minutes of the Board of Trustees, Kearns said in a statement, he was called into the chancellor's office by Personnel Director Frank J. Koski. In the presence of Koski, secretary Elise Clifford (who gave him access to the documents), and Personnel Supervisor William Spaeter, Kearns was told attorney Conrad R. Kohrs was on the telephone.

Kohrs, attorney for several of the defendants, purportedly told Kearns to "leave the district's office immediately, not to talk to any personnel in the office, and not to read any further records of the meetings of the defendant Board of Trustees."

Kearns also said in his declaration that he later returned with Stanton J. Price, attorney at the Western Center on Law and Poverty, and was refused access to the records a second time. Even after agreeing to pay a $6.75 charge for copies of the district's minutes, the attorney was told "No" by Kohrs (as relayed by telephone through Dr. John Kaufman, deputy superintendent of the district).

Two weeks ago, Judge Thomas issued a temporary restraining order against the board and college district. It barred the removal, mutilation, destroying, or altering of any official records, minutes, and agenda communications.

Such documents are required to be maintained and available to public inspection. Since a present threat to the records could not be proved, however, a permanent injunction was not granted.

Court OK Needed

It has been recognized by the trustees that "electronic surveillance without court authorization is a criminal act in violation of the California Penal Code and the United States Criminal Code."

The plaintiffs to the Martin suit, which includes individual students and faculty, and the 1,200-member American Federation of Teachers, claim tapped telephone conversations, the illegal maintenance of files on the political and social beliefs of students, faculty, and employees, and the use of hidden surveillance devices without "probable cause or prior judicial authorization."

Evidence of the supposed occurrences is in the form of tape recordings, inter-college memoranda, and witnesses' testimony.

In his declaration, Dr. Brinkman admitted authorizing a March 4, 1971, meeting of the Black Student Union to be secretly recorded. He did this, he said, because of threats against his life.

An informed source says that although one student heard "something about a bomb in Dr. Brinkman's car" spoken at the meeting, it was not mentioned seriously. Asked later to repeat in court the statement that he permitted tapings because of concern for his safety, Dr. Brinkman invoked the Fifth Amendment.

Another example charges that college records of "militants" (i.e. BSU, MECHA, SDS) were photocopied and given over to the Los Angeles Police Department in violation of criminal law. Students handing political fliers off campus also claim they were photographed in order for Trade-Tech police to develop dossiers on liberal activists. The officers allegedly concerned have invoked the amendment against self-incrimination.

Electronic Equipment

Jacqueline Jones, an officer at Trade-Tech, testified she saw electronic equipment in the campus police office, and observed some of the defendants move district records from that office to the defendants' private vehicles.

In an inter-college correspondence between Officer William Janosco and Captain of Trade-Tech Police E. C. Monteverde, Janosco writes, "... this officer (Janosco) and Officer Skipper contacted Mr. Burgess in the Audio-Visual Department and secured a video-tape recorder and attempted to photograph the parties passing out the leaflets, results: inconclusive."

Ms. Jones, fully responsive to court questioning, also said she had been made aware that files were being kept on students whom security considered militant.

In a declaration, Harold Cole, a now-dismissed policeman at Trade-Tech, claims school admission records at Los Angeles City College were being copied and released to local law enforcement agencies. One news source quotes accused policewoman Sharon Bailey saying she does "it all the time," but in order to locate missing persons.

"I guess I probably looked up militant students for other reasons," she stated in the news report. They (militants) may be "thieves," wanted for "assault" or have "personal problems."

Stanley Burgess, the Audio-Visual consultant at Trade-Tech, said on April 13, 1972, that all the electronic equipment at the college is owned by the district's Educational Services Department. He said under perjury that he could not bring the hardware to court because it would take three trucks to transport the devices capable of eavesdropping. The value of such instruments, he said, exceeds $1 million.

Asked if any electronic surveillance devices are a part of Valley's security, Captain Wallace Gudzus said, "Never," although campus police powers permit "stalking out" an area.

Definitive Evidence

Robert Mundy, one of the attorneys for the Martin case, stated he had "definitive evidence" of surveillance at Valley, but would not elaborate.

In the two suits, various faculty members and campus speakers claim a stifling of free expression. Rev. Jesse Boyd's class-action litigation asks $3,000 damages for every campus guest speaker since 1969 and $1 million punitive damages.

Rev. Boyd claims his speaking appearance at Trade-Tech was recorded without consent, in addition to informal meetings with students and the dean of students.

John Buchanan, associate professor of speech and plaintiff in the Martin suit, stated in his declaration last year that the "increasing atmosphere of repression and surveillance (security guards stand on the fringes of most student speech activity sites) has increased of late my concern for my own safety, job security, and ... ability to teach."

Senior Citizens Day For 'Young at Heart'

"A tribute to the Young at Heart," namely Senior Citizens Day, was held at Valley for the first time last week.

"This was," said Max Goodman, president of the Senior Foundation located in Van Nuys and chairman of the event, "more of an experiment to see how things went in the program. I hope it is the beginning of many more annual Senior Citizen Days."

The welcoming ceremonies in Monarch Hall started with Jennifer Goddard, student body president, who warmly welcomed the guests and introduced Dr. Robert Horton, president of Valley College.

Also speaking were Jack London, who represented Supervisor Baxter Ward; a representative for Assemblyman Bob Moretti; Congressman James Corman, and State Senator Alan Robbins.

Finally, Goodman greeted the guests, and the program swung into song, music, and dance supplied by the Los Angeles Valley College Festival Chorus, Dance Band, and Modern Dance Group.

Dr. George Fishbeck, weather reporter for KABC-TV, gave a short presentation, followed by senior citizen instrumental singing groups. Events continued in the Women's Gym.

"I had quite a bit of feedback in the program," remarked Goodman, "and everyone enjoyed it."

"We had seven busses of people coming to the campus from all over the Valley," he continued. "That's about 300 people, and I was apprehensive about the busses arriving and leaving on time. But everything went like clockwork. It was a balanced and beautiful program."

At the dance in the Women's Gym, several door prizes, coordinated by Bill Richardson, a member of the committee for Senior Citizen's Day, were handed out. And then strains of music from a past era filled the hall, hearts, and minds of our senior citizens—who are truly "young at hearts."

Girls' Teams Show Well; Maga Loses

Two of three Valley women's teams clinched important victories last week. Following is an account

SWIMMING

The 1973 women's swim team concluded its season in top form. Although they placed eighth among 12 teams in the Southern California Championships at Orange Coast College last week, some of the performances were impressive.

Captain Jamie Barnes took two individual third places in the 50-yard freestyle and 50-yard butterfly events.

Pennie Feehan placed third in the 50-yard backstroke, and ninth in the 50-yard freestyle events, and the medley relay team finished third at 2:10.1.

SOFTBALL

After winning 10 straight Metro Conference games, Valley fell to a powerful Pasadena City College squad, 4-2, last week at Golden West College in the Southern California Championships.

BADMINTON

Karen Southwick and Murray Adams won the Southern California Mixed-Doubles Badminton Championships at Cerritos College last week, to wrap-up an outstanding season.

Fencing Team Takes First At Southern California Meet

By LARRY ALLEN
Sports Editor

While the "major" sports such as baseball and track have been grabbing most of the attention and support of the Valley College fans, the little-known Monarch fencing team has been taking a great number of the awards and trophies.

Although troubled early in the year by injuries, the Valley fencers put it all together May 13 at Pasadena, winning 30 straight bouts en route to a first-place finish in the Southern California Invitational championships.

"Nobody can beat that record," proudly boasted team captain Norm Flam referring to the team's perfect record in the tourney. "It was a great team performance."

The Monarchs were led in the finals by Len Carnighan and Tyrone Villenave, who finished second and third respectively overall. Flam, recovering from mononucleosis, was forced to drop out after his first bout.

In the women's division, Valley also did very well, finishing third in team competition. The team was composed of Mikal Grimaud, Sue Greenburg, and Donna Forman.

Ten teams were represented in the tourney, with Valley finishing well ahead of Pasadena City College and College of the Desert, second and third place finishers, respectively. Other schools represented were El Camino, Riverside, Pierce, and Bakersfield (both Valley and Riverside entered three teams).

Asked why Valley's caliber of fencing was so much better, Flam said, "We have so much more experience than most other schools. The whole year we've been competing intercollegiately, mostly against four-year schools. Every fencer is a team captain and a seasoned veteran."

Flam believes that one of the main reasons the team has been fighting anonymity so long, is that not enough take it seriously. "When I tell someone I'm a fencer," he quipped, "they ask me if I do chain-linked or wire. They are always poking fun at our program." (He later confided that he had a personal preference to Ivanhoe over the Three Musketeers.)

Most members of the team take the sport quite seriously, though, and were good enough to be one of only two community colleges to be invited to the West Coast Fencing championships held earlier in the year in San Francisco. Although they did not fair very well, it was a great accomplishment just to be invited.

The Monarch fencers meet on Tuesday and Thursday nights between 7:30 and 11 in the Women's Gym. Anyone interested is invited to attend, even beginners, according to Flam.

For those considering fencing, Flam believes it takes a combination of form, precision, speed, timing, and quickness. "It's not all physical, though," Flam advises. "The mind also plays an important part. Often, fencing requires outthinking an opponent more than outfighting him."

Schweitzer Gets Sixth in Finals

One may be a lonely number for some, but Valley scored only one point in the Southern California Junior College track championships Saturday at Compton College.

The lone point was secured by Scott Schweitzer, who placed sixth, in the three mile and was timed in 14:28.4. Valley's only other representative, John Loomis, finished eighth in the mile run. Loomis scored an all-time best of 4:14.4 in the four-lap race.

Metro Conference champion Bakersfield continued on the road to the state championship by capturing the meet, with 54 points to runnerup LACC's 47. All other Metro teams scored, led by Pasadena with 19, El Camino 16, Long Beach 13, Pierce 10, and of course Valley's one point.

BIG AL HERE

A Stroke for Women's Lib

A lot of attention has been focused on Bobby Riggs, tennis' mellowing male chauvinist piglet, who recently utilized his junkyard of strokes to humble women's net queen Margaret Court.

Since his surprisingly easy win, most have been quick to condemn the caliber of women's play. What few realize, however, is that several months earlier an 18-year-old blonde-haired Long Beach City College coed was performing a similar feat in reverse.

Less dramatically but just as efficiently, Sue Ince was taking advantage of a new Metropolitan Conference ruling making women eligible to compete in men's varsity collegiate sports by defeating almost every male opponent in sight. She compiled a fine 8-2 record in singles in the Metro, and played well enough in doubles to be top-ranked in conference.

Miss Ince is one of three women competing in the Metro. The other two, Susie Atwood and Ann Simmons, both former Olympic competitors, who are also from Long Beach, have enjoyed similar success this year in swimming.

Although Miss Ince may not be overpowering, she plays a steady, controlled game, making very few mistakes and relying on excellent placement. Once in a while she will surprise everyone with an awesome serve or overhead that belies her slight frame.

Against Valley earlier in the year, she played her consistent game to near perfection. In convincing fashion, she defeated Gary Marks and Brett Scott (twice). She also won both double's matches.

Miss Ince confided after the matches that she is not an adamant feminist who believes that female athletes are equal to the men in ability, but she just simply loves the game of tennis and enjoys top level competition, which she seldom found on her women's high school team.

"There are several levels of competition in collegiate sports," says her Long Beach tennis coach Bennie Crigger. "Because she is at the varsity level in ability, that is where she should perform."

LARRY ALLEN
Sports Editor

Of course, the new ruling is not without its drawbacks. It may not mark an end to women's athletics, but if enough top quality women decide to compete with the men instead, women's sports will lose much of its appeal and competitiveness.

If the women do make the varsity, another problem arises. What will happen to the man that would have competed if he wasn't displaced by a woman? While he can't compete for the varsity, it would be just as unrealistic to allow him to take the place of a girl on the women's team.

Riggs may have deflated a few female egos with his recent triumph, but in the Metropolitan Conference, mixed play has had quite the opposite effect. There may not be a clear wrong or right concerning the ruling, but for a few gifted female athletes, I think they deserve a chance to compete against the best. If you don't believe me, just ask Marks, Scott, and a few other competitors in the Metro—they learned the hard way.

END ZONE

Limit—200 M.P.H.

Automobile racing is the number two spectator sport in the country, taking a back seat only to horse racing. Yet, it has been given a second class billing by sports editors and broadcasters throughout the country.

Very few papers carry any motor-sports news in anything but agate type except on Memorial Day for the Indy 500. There is one glaring exception. Just let one car hit the wall, one driver get hurt, or anything out of the ordinary take place, and it's banner headline time.

On the first day of qualifying at Indy this year, 46-year-old Art Pollard hit the wall in turn one, went into the infield and flipped over before going back on the track. Pollard died one hour later. A tragic incident to be sure, but why had nobody bothered to let the public know that the trials were taking place until they had a nice picture of him burning in his car?

Stu Nahan, KABC-TV's night sportscaster, came on the air the following Monday to advocate the banning of championship auto racing while saying he was "convinced that race fans go to Indy just to see who will be killed next."

It is unfortunate that his view is shared by the majority of people who carry the news of the sports world to us. Of course, Nahan didn't lose the chance to show the video tape of the Pollard crash twice.

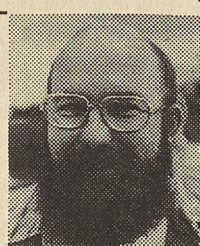

I think that if anyone bothered to check, you would find that the percentage of race fans that want to see an accident is about equal to the percentage of football fans who want to see somebody break his neck.

The only people who seem to thrive on the tragedy of a race fatality are the non-fans and journalists who sell them papers with giant headlines.

It is generally agreed that the speeds at Indy should be cut back but for Nahan to request that the public get together and force the cessation of the "carnage" is setting a pretty dangerous precedent. He didn't bother to note that the cars have had a much better safety record in recent years than they did 20 years ago. Their record is far better than the Hollywood Freeway.

Nahan is a former goalie in professional hockey. If everyone that doesn't like a particular sport can call for its banishment let's hope that the American Dental Society doesn't get after hockey.

GEORGE L. PHILLIPS

Over a quarter of a million people will be at Indianapolis Monday to watch the granddaddy of all auto racing in the United States. The race will be on radio to every English speaking country in the world, and some that will need translations. I hope that more fans than myself will be listening without hoping that somebody gets killed.

Reichle Makes Southern Cal; Four Lions Make All Metro

Valley baseball players captured four spots on the 1973 Metropolitan Conference first team, and three were added to the second squad.

Local members were Mal Washington, Rich Reichle, Bob Azzarito, and Mike Farenbaugh on the first team; and Phil Barnes, John Gaines, and Terry Bernard filled out the Monarch representatives.

Player of the year was Long Beach's John Sagehorn.

Three members of the squad were also named to the Southern California team. They were Reichle, first team; Azzarito, second team, and Washington, honorable mention.

State Championships End Metro Season

Last week proved to be a somewhat success for Metro Conference athletic teams despite Long Beach's close defeat to Cerritos College in baseball and Pasadena's fine showing in the state tennis championships.

BASEBALL

Coach Joe Hicks and his Vikings narrowly were defeated by Cerritos last Saturday, 2-1, concluding the Vikes fine year at 28-10.

Cerritos' Coach Walter Kincaid will bring an impressive number one ranking and 36-4 overall record into the state finals against northern champion College of San Mateo.

The San Mateo nine will bring a 30-5 record with them as the northern representative.

The first game will be tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. with the second game scheduled for 11:30 a.m. on Saturday. A third game if necessary will follow the second contest.

TENNIS

The Lancers of Pasadena College were the only Metro representatives in the state tennis finals held Saturday at Canada College.

In singles play Curt Condon was defeated by John Hursh of Canada,

6-4, 6-4, in the semi-finals. Condon and Ross Hollowell qualified in doubles by dumping Hursh and Randy Marx of Canada, 7-5, 6-4.

The finals were the end for Condon's and Hollowell's hopes for a doubles championship. Both were defeated 6-7, 6-2, 6-4, by San Diego City's Mark Berner and Steve Whitehead.

GOLF

Long Beach City College only finished second in the Metro during the regular season, but apparently because they were only number two they tried harder when the playoffs began in golf.

The Vikings put their best performance together when it really counted—in the state finals—as they scored a low total of 918 to win the state team title. El Camino, the Metro's other team representative finished in a tie for seventh at 947.

Roger Calvin (Santa Ana) and Tom Pera (San Jose) both had rounds of 145 to lead the individual competition. Clint Owen and Jeff Frenenburg, both of Long Beach, led Metro finishers, tying for sixth with a 148 two-round total.

'Spring Music Festival' Held

This week's "Spring Music Festival" presented by the LAVC Music Department will continue tonight with the LAVC Dance and Studio-Jazz Bands and tomorrow night with the LAVC Symphony Orchestra. Both concerts will be in Monarch Hall at 8 p.m.

"Post War Serenity" by Michael Wetherwax will be premiered by the Orchestra. Other pieces will include "Symphony No. 5, Opus 84" by Tschalkowsky and "Peer Gynt Suite No. 1, Opus 46" and "No. 2, Opus 55" by Grieg.

Dance Band is under the direction of Don Nelligan and the Studio-Jazz Band is under the direction of Dick Carlson. Theodore A. Lynn will conduct the Symphony Orchestra.

'Dracula' Will Frighten All

"Dracula," will be presented to-night through Saturday at 8:30 in Valley College's Little Theater.

Starring Randy Sheriff as Dracula, the portrayal is designed to depart from the overworked Bela Lugosi interpretation.

An adaption of Brian Stoker's novel, the play takes place in a sanitarium, 20 miles out of London, circa 1928.

The plot centers around noble Dr. Van Helsing's exposure of Count Dracula's blood-thirsty exploits. Dracula, a native Transylvanian, makes his way to England (by way of a German flier) for the purpose of seeking juicier prospects, and ends up victimizing the local sanitarium patients. The Count resides in a run down chateau situated next to the sanitarium.

Directed by Peter Pankin, the Theater Arts Department expects a full and well appreciated turnout. Students having an I.D. card will be charged $1.50 and general admission is $2.

THE 'GODSPELL' GROUP splashes about at the reflecting pool between the Vivian Beaumont Theatre and Philharmonic Hall in Lincoln Center. Left to right: Jeffrey, Katie, Joanne, Merrell, Jerry, Lynne with Gilmer, Victor and Robin. The beautiful play has been made into a movie.

'Godspell' Related as Beautiful; Love, Moral's Universality Told

"Godspell," the off-Broadway play that hit the big time, has made its transition from stage to screen. The move by this enveloping, loving play, however, has fallen victim to the medium.

Although the play is all there and more (a new number has been added), the charm of Stephen Schwartz's word said music don't hug the viewer or evoke the sense of participation that the stage play did.

Beautiful in Own Right
In its own right, though, the movie can be described as "beautiful." Set in our contemporary world, the Gospel according to St. Matthew is interwoven into a series of lively, extremely colorful vignettes.

Although the overtones are religious, the film's plethora of morals and love is universal. The disheartening fact about the movie's message is that man's instincts and world realities won't allow compassion to thrive.

An educational guide to the film points out the importance of the "moving joy" in "Godspell." Action concerns non-verbal communication, ritual and improvisation; dance and pure movement. It is enthusiasm. The film's 10 multi-talented youngsters envelop this freedom, and beckon you to join them.

Characterization Diverse

"This scene has been enacted thousands and thousands of times," wrote Edward Hall. "One person trying to increase the distance in order to be at ease, while the other tries to decrease it for the same reason." This is the last of a series of five films sponsored by the Italian Club. All proceeds go towards scholarships for students in Italian.

The backdrop of New York City also supplies innumerable dancing and musical numbers that come off uncannily well. Schwartz's talents even permeate the background music.

"The Last Supper" is there, along with a modish Crucifixion. This is where the ethos of the play succeeded so well. As the film ends, however, we see the spark created by the ensemble become engulfed in a flood of isolated humanity. The garden no longer exists. The dream is over.

—John Reid

'Dolce Vita' Appears In Monarch Hall

The Fellini film series will present "Le Dolce Vita," Wednesday night at 8 in Monarch Hall. Admission is $1.

This is the last of a series of five films sponsored by the Italian Club. All proceeds go towards scholarships for students in Italian.

Puppets Used In Delighting Eager Youths

By GEORGE L. PHILLIPS
Sports Editor

Nothing can capture the fancy of a young child like an animal, an animal of any description.

The Los Angeles Valley College Puppet Theatre used this theory to entertain overflow crowds at the Horseshoe Theater the past two weekends.

There were animals of every size, shape, and color. There were elephants, kangaroos, swans, fish, frogs, cocoons, and even a mermaid, which is at least part animal.

It was the Carnival of the Animals combined with an old time "Punch and Judy" shadow puppet show. The kids loved it almost as much as their parents.

Their appreciation was very justified. A lot of preparation and time are spent in preparing a show of this type. The ingenuity of the construction of the puppets themselves is something to behold.

Fun and Beauty

An old sock becomes a beautiful swan. Pieces of styrofoam become a dinosaur. Cardboard and bits of cloth become a group of musical frogs. It all adds up to fun for the graduates and members of the Puppetry I and II classes held here at Valley.

Betsy Brown, the energetic perpetrator of such goings-on on campus serves as narrator and general crowd control expert as she introduces her present and past students and their puppets to the groups of children.

The show begins with two clowns (live) showing off some of the more simple hand varieties of puppets, and then comes the "Punch and Judy" show.

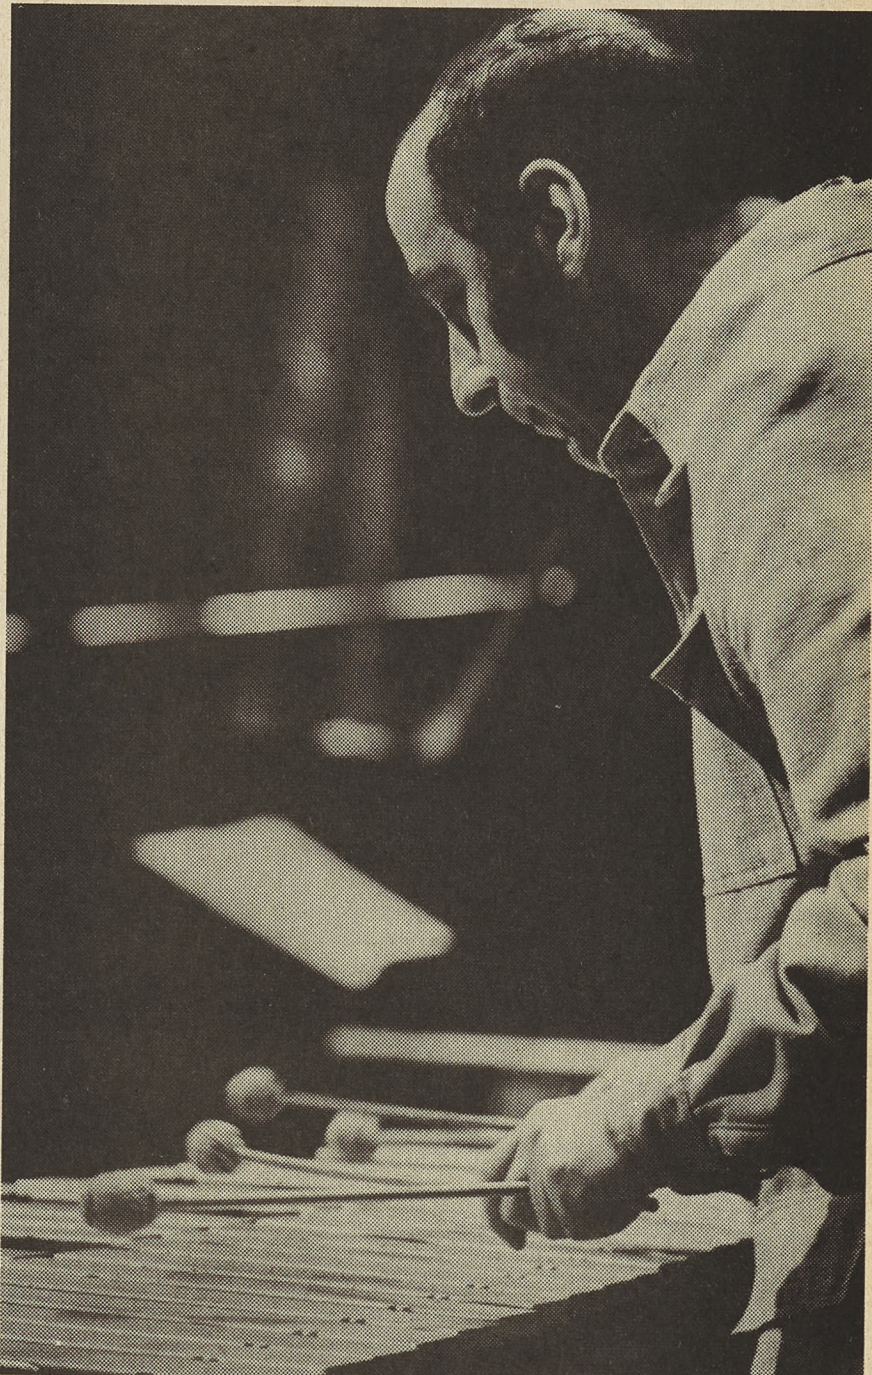

Few children have seen the old style shadow presentation and their mystification soon turns to delight as the old "That's the way to do it" is chanted over and over by the audience.

Punch uses his faithful club to subdue Judy, and then the devil runs him off and says, "That's the way to do it."

Next it's time for the animals. For one half hour the troupe does something that all parents try to do all their lives. They keep a room full of small children occupied with animal puppets.

'Rebirth of Soul' Dies While Still Lying on Delivery Table

By MOLLIE STEWART
Staff Writer

After some technical problems, the "Rebirth of Soul" began their set in the Free Speech area last Tuesday. This was the first gig the group has played together, and perhaps their last. They opened their set with "Season of the Witch" which dragged on for an agonizingly long 10 minutes, providing time to introduce the members of the band. The organ, played by Michael Mast, was overpowering—in volume only—drowning out the other instruments and singers.

Ghetto Revival

Their second song, "The World Is a Ghetto," was no improvement. Ethel Thomas, the lead singer, was drowned out by Gene Haggerty, another singer and the drummer for the group. Ms. Thomas sang louder in this song which was a mistake. Before this number we had to guess what her voice was like. But now the mystery was over; better she had remained mysterious. The only relief from this massacre of "music" was a guitar solo by Mitchell McConnell, lead guitarist.

Another song "Natural High" featured Ms. Thomas. She seemed to be straining to reach the high notes, making her voice weak and crackly. The music is not written in that high a key but Ms. Thomas seemed to enjoy shrill tones and sang every song in that chilling fashion. "Rebirth of Soul" wrapped up their show with Buddy Miles' song "Changes." This song was the best song they played but it sounded as though someone had turned the music up to 78 r.p.m.

All in all, this is one group that, hopefully, did not perform to the best of their ability.

The average Navy Pilot isn't.

No man who has mastered the flying skills it takes to fly and land on a ship at sea can be called an average pilot. And the sense of accomplishment and satisfaction that he enjoys are also above average. Which is only right. For the man who would go places as a Naval Aviator must pass through the most challenging and demanding training program to be found anywhere.

From Aviation Officer Candidate School through Flight Training to the day his golden Navy Wings are awarded, he is tested; driven; pushed and tested again. And for good reason. The Navy has learned that without the will to succeed, no man can be successful.

Which brings us to you. Do you have what it takes to fly Navy? Talk with your local Navy recruiter. Or, call him at

Disappointing but Fun

First Swapmeet Reviewed

Only one thing can be said about the first IOC Swapmeet held last Sunday: disappointing but fun.

Disappointing in the fact that numerous clubs, which indicated that they would have booths and games, backed out at the last minute.

"Weather was our number one problem," said Randy Smith, current IOC chairman. "A lot of people dropped out at the last minute."

"We're having a lot of fun," chirped in Jan Crane, the former IOC chairperson who organized most of the event.

"We haven't had much student response, though. Most of the visitors have been from the community," she added. "But, we've done a good job for the first time."

The planned BSU and MECHA boycott apparently took its toll. Neither club was represented at the event and attendance among Blacks and Chicanos was sparse.

But for those who came, well... Ever eaten barbecued alone? Sounds delicious, doesn't it? The Scuba Club offered this culinary delight to all for only 25 cents.

How about throwing darts at poker cards? This particular event captured all the little kiddies at the meet, letting them throw something at the board in return for a prize.

And, to top it off, there was a Community Services ju-jitsu demonstration, where wives learned how to keep their husband at bay.

Participants were offered a plethora of deals for leather purses, used golf clubs, records (numerous groups sold records, including the Broadcasting Club, which sold KLAV's "Bottom 80"), wigs, plants, used vacuum cleaners, jewelry, chrome rims, and even '57 Ford hubcaps.

One young lady even sketched a reasonable facsimile of your portrait for a mere $2.

Added attractions were a series of four bands, which, despite numerous electrical problems, added to the carnival atmosphere.

Controversial Budget
Endorsed by Council

Mike Zugsmith, commissioner of social activities and Star's fine arts editor, lobbied to have Sceptre replaced into the budget, but he failed when he recommended that funds for the magazine be found by cancelling out several A.S. sponsored student banquets.

"He antagonized them," one dean and one commissioner said afterwards in reference to Zugsmith and the other commissioners.

Zugsmith tried later in the meeting to reintroduce the plan, this time requiring that persons who wanted the magazine and did not have paid I.D.'s would have to pay 50 cents for Sceptre if they wanted it.

Free?

At this time, Sceptre is free to all students, but is paid for by A.S. funds. Crown yearbook is also paid for by A.S. funds, but those with paid I.D. who want the yearbook must pay $3 per copy.

Zugsmith said he plans to reintroduce the motion today. When he attempted to present the "50 cents" proposal last week, he was stopped short by the council, which did not want to hear his "special order of business."

The officers did not know as they voted this order down that it included a purchase price for non-paid I.D.'s.

At least two council members (Vice-President Randy Smith and Recording Secretary Shari Genser) indicated to fellow student officers during the meeting that they might vote for Sceptre if this fee were included. However, they voted against hearing the special order of business.

Books to Pay

Funding for Crown will come from an anticipated bookstore surplus of $8,000—still almost $1,000 less than what Crown usually costs for production.

(The Valley Star is funded by the college district and advertising revenue, not by A.S. funds. Star runs at a yearly cost of $22,000.)

Supporting Zugsmith was a large contingent of journalism students—complete with 15 shutter-snapping photographers—who crowded the council room in a show of force to revive the publications.

Marcy Young, editor of Crown (which comes out this week) presented the council with an overview of the yearbook's aims and purposes. Included in her presentation were printer's copies of some Crown pages.

Vanessa Finan, next year's yearbook editor, read to the council a letter from L.A. Times reporter Bill Farr, who urged the council to save the publications.
